

It's All About Kids

Client Story: Angelice,
Andrew, Shiasia

"This program helps children tremendously ... it builds confidence and self-esteem."

participants.

Shortly after Darhleen relocated her family to Florida, she found herself in a difficult position. Her husband suffered from substance abuse, and her daughter and two grandchildren, whom she cared for full-time, were showing signs of withdrawal. Their schoolwork was suffering, and Darhleen was all too aware of the threat this posed to their futures.

Fortunately, Darhleen learned about It's All About Kids' Buzz Into Books program. She enrolled the children and soon discovered that the program not only increased their reading and study skills, but also did wonders for their self esteem.

"My five-year-old granddaughter, Shiasia, would always fidget, but now she sits still for story time," Darhleen says. "Her older brother, Andrew, is now an expert on the computers in the Buzz Learning Lab, and my daughter, Angelice can't get enough of the books in the Buzz Learning Lab library."

Darhleen has noticed that all three children are better behaved, more diligent about schoolwork, and seem to enjoy learning. Each of them has received rewards for their good work in the Buzz programs.

Darhleen reinforced the value of her family's participation in It's All About Kids programs by taking part in the nonprofit's Parent Training Clinics. She credits the clinics with teaching her how to encourage her children.

"This program helps families tremendously," she says. "There are so many activities for them to do. It keeps them engaged and away from bad influences. And most importantly, it builds confidence and self-esteem."
